Briefly describe the dispute that gave rise to this lawsuit.

This is a putative consumer class action. Plaintiffs allege that Costco knowingly sells farmed Southeast Asian prawns that are derived from a supply chain tainted by slave labor, human rights abuses and human trafficking. Plaintiffs allege that Costco should—but does not—disclose the tainted supply chain to consumers. Plaintiffs also allege that Costco's affirmative statements about its human rights policies are misleading. Plaintiffs allege claims under California Business & Professions Code § 17200, California Business and Professions Code Section 17500, et seq., and the Consumer Legal Remedies Act, Civil Code Section 1750, et seq.

Briefly describe the result below and the main issues on appeal.

Plaintiffs appeal from the District Court's January 24, 2017 Order dismissing the complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiffs appeal only the decision as it applies to Costco, and not to the CP Foods Defendants. In dismissing the case, Judge Jeffrey White held that Costco did not owe Plaintiffs a duty to disclose facts regarding the tainted supply chain and further held that the FAL does not apply to omissions. The Court did not reach certain of Costco's other arguments, including the argument that Plaintiffs' claims are barred by the safe harbor doctrine (this relates to Cal. Civ. Code § 1714.43, the Transparency in Supply Chains Act, which went into effect in California in 2012 and requires certain large retailers to disclose their "efforts to eradicate slavery and human trafficking from its direct supply chain for tangible goods offered for sale").

Describe any proceedings remaining below or any related proceedings in other tribunals.

There are no remaining proceedings before the District Court. Plaintiffs are not aware of related proceedings in other tribunals. However, following the filing of Sud v. Costco et al. there were a number of putative class actions filed by other plaintiffs (represented by other counsel) against other companies, alleging non-disclosure of tainted supply chains. One such case is Barber v. Nestlé USA, Inc. (C.D.Cal. Dec. 9, 2015, No. SACV 15-01364-CJC(AGRx)), at last check these cases are on appeal to the Ninth Circuit.
